EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

How did we grow into something so unbelievably vital, uplifting and admirable? Artown in July is that and more…

A — R — T — O — W — N

A – Accessibility

Artown is about the community – it is Reno’s festival. It gives locals (and visitors) a means to have access to national and international performances that are unsurpassed in terms of enriching our lives. Everyone was invited to be a part of the 32 days in July (the festival ended on Friday, August 1st). With over 70% of the events and performances free, the community has access to the multi-disciplinary experiences.

Artown provides a platform for the entire community to create their personal Artown during July. Because we have so many events from music, children’s events, dance, theater and then…Controlled Burn, Doors to Recovery, Riverside Artist Lofts, Steinway Gallery, exhibits, tours, literary crawls, pipe organs, storytelling, ensemble concerts, opera, cultural fairs and more, there is something for everyone.

R – Reactionary

Artown reacts to the ever-changing world in which we live using the arts as a mechanism to broaden the global scope of our lives. We challenge audiences to expand their definition of culture by offering a festival that pushes boundaries and enriches lives.

“The show must go on” is a phrase in show business meaning that regardless of what happens, whatever show has been planned still has to be staged for the waiting patrons. This was Artown’s mantra this year with the influx of inclement weather, the grounding of Bartley Ranch’s Los Lonely Boys aircraft in Texas and the transportation delays and disruptions with World Music Cuban artists Conjunto Chappottin y Sus Estrellas in Sacramento. Artown was proud to be a master of this phrase. Truly, the shows did go on!

T – Transformational

That is what we have done over the 19 years with Artown. We have transformed our community into a thriving arts and culture region. From the transformation of Midtown, Holland Project, the addition of downtown’s Terry Lee Wells Discovery Museum, new art galleries, river walks, art walks and district walks – we are constantly transforming the soul of Reno.

The core vision for Artown continues to be within our own community, but we also strive to include visitors to our area for the Artown experience. This year we placed colorful billboards in highly visible traffic areas. Both 14’ x 48’ boards were on Interstate 80 with one in Sparks, Nevada and one in Colfax, California. Of course, national exposure continues to be at the center front of our marketing goals; this year, USA Today asked us to be included in the new on-line Explore America segment “Best Of”—“Best Of Festivals.”

O – Outstanding

This truly described the month of July in Reno. Where else can children explore the arts, become a balloon character in the Wizard of Oz or attend a family-friendly fire art experience with Compression? Artown boasts local children performing in a production of Rapunzel, living legend Don McLean serenaded us with American Pie and a closing night extravaganza in the park with hip hop rock sensation Ozomatli. The depth of the festival is outstanding.

Partnerships are essential to our organization; collaborations create different levels of support ranging from marketing, promotions, execution and logistics. The year began with a partnership between local artist, Whitney Myer, as the Friend of Artown Ambassador that developed a collaborative model for us to use throughout the year. We continue to focus on the outstanding talent in Reno as well as the region. This enables Artown to provide the basis for the community to explore the arts at little or no cost.

W – Whimsical

Quirky, unusual, imaginative, original, creative, amusing, playful.

“The People” Project. Collaborations are essential to successful marketing. Included this year was our partnership with The Boys and Girls Club of Truckee Meadows. We received 50 statues (a.k.a. “The People”) that were used as a marketing icon for Artown. In order to be effective in our creative concepts, we asked the local Boys and Girls Club to design “The People” and create their own icon. The children were inspired by local signature events as well as a means to express their individual creativity. We had an Aces statue, a Spiderman, an African themed boy and many others. The results were impressive and were placed in Wingfield Park every night. KOLO News 8 featured the children and statues during the local news. The message was that we not only cross marketed with other non-profits, but created a model for us to use in the future. Non-profits teaming up with each other to build awareness, creativity and momentum.

By inspiring and educating children, they learn traits that will help them as an adult - working as a team, leadership, creativity, developing a thought process and finally seeing their final project and the crowds that gathered around them. By utilizing our “People” as an integral part of our branding campaign, we created a fun and unique way to showcase our events.

Monday Family Series. Bugs, balloons, songs, spiders, theater and PBS TV personalities shared the stage and audience applause every Monday at Wingfield Park. This entertaining and family inspired series continues to be a highlight of the festival. Headliners were: a theatrical production of “Charlotte’s Web” on July 7th; madcap balloon artist, Allynn Gooen, created a unique performance of the “Wizard of Oz” on July 14th; an interactive musical performance from Norman Foote on July 21st and the series closed with PBS KIDS celebrities, Mr. Steve and Miss Rosa on July 28th.

One evening the children were mesmerized by local dancers dressed as a praying mantis, butterflies and more. These colorful characters may return to the stage next year as weather dampened this year’s experience. Emceed by Connie Wray from Reno Media Group, we showed the community that families are the crux to our community and Artown. Each week, organizations lined the park with booths featuring free activities.

• Downtown Sparks Kiwanis held interactive art projects that were integrated with the headliner’s weekly theme. During the Charlotte’s Web performance, children created lollipop spiders with pipe cleaners. At the Mr. Steve and Miss Rosa (PBS KIDS) performance, individual music shakers were created out of toilet roll papers and individually decorated. During one of the evenings, Fruit Loop necklaces were the main project.

• Children selected from designs ranging from flowers to dinosaurs with free face painting.

Colorful characters at Monday Night Family Series
• Grassroots Book gave away free books each week

• The Terry Lee Wells Discovery Museum offered hands on activities and information about the museum’s camps and programs

• KNPB featured projects each week - bracelets created with pipe cleaners; coloring pages with stamps; interactive iPads with PBS KIDS games and free reading logs and bookmarks were distributed to encourage summer reading

• Sketching, painting, and giggles galore from the Girl Scouts of the Sierra Nevada. Girls explored their inner artists at this year’s Family Festival by creating colorful sketches and paintings. Scouts earned their very own Painting and Drawing Girl Scout badges to proudly display on their uniform

• Live appearances by Clifford The Big Red Dog, Bob The Builder, Buddy and Curious George sponsored by KNPB Public Television

• Cuddles the Clown created balloon animals each week sponsored by Circus Circus Hotel and Casino

• Children painted on a wall mural sponsored by U.S. Bank

N – Never

We never want to go back to the way Reno was. We remember 19 years ago when the vision was to transform Reno into a vital and economic cultural center. There was no kayak park, no arts district, no reveling in Wingfield Park, just hot summers. Reno is truly Artown!

THE SHOW MUST GO ON

The Show Must Go On was the motto of our July 2014 Festival. Advance preparations can never account for unexplainable events. This season, we experienced many obstacles and challenges yet Artown was determined to make the show go on and that is exactly what we did. Unlike the weather, many challenges were invisible to the audience complementing the seamless abilities of the Artown team.

We faced airline interruptions and delays with Los Lonely Boys due to first an aircraft mechanical error in San Angelo, Texas, then air space being closed in Austin due to President Obama’s arrival on Air Force One. Finally, a private charter was secured and the group arrived in Reno with a slight delay. They were exhausted due to the long journey but put on an excellent performance for the exhilarated crowd of 1,000.

Come rain or shine, the Artown crowd came out for each event.
The weather is always a topic of discussion especially in Reno. July 2014 had the harsh weather patterns with the week leading up to Opening Night reaching daily highs of 105 degrees. One Family Series in particular experienced treacherous weather with such heavy winds, it was raining sideways. Pop up tents were destroyed and banners were torn in half by the high speed gusts. However; the show went on.

Simultaneously, blue skies appeared in south Reno just in time for the Monday Night Music Series at Bartley Ranch to begin. Attendees came prepared, which made for a colorful umbrella gazebo in the audience. Interestingly enough, immediately following the festival in August, there was a total of 1.08 inches of rain which is 0.85 inches above normal. Coincidence or not, Artown ended just in time for the unexpected rainfall.

World Music Series headliner Conjunto Chappottin y Sus Estrellas, had never been to the United States. To show hospitality and make the transfer easier, Artown coordinated their transportation to Reno from Sacramento. Due to the heat, the vehicle broke down. The group, unable to communicate in English, patiently waited for a new bus from Reno to arrive.

HEADLINES AND HIGHLIGHTS

Opening Night. On July 1st was a celebration featuring opening act, Sherrie Austin and headliner band, Mountain Heart, a 6-piece group that combines elements of rock, jam band, country, blues, jazz, folk and Bluegrass music into a high-energy sound. Keeping fresh with the music industry trends, Artown hand picks entertainment to reinforce our vision of interconnecting the community through the arts. Introductory remarks were made by Councilmembers Jenny Brekus and Hillary Schieve.

Artown’s New Series. Of special note this year is the new private/public partnership that we developed with Washoe County when we presented a new gated series at the Robert Z. Hawkins Amphitheater every Thursday night. All four performances reached capacity houses and this series will continue in 2015.

Headliners included: Texican Rock and Roll artists and brothers, Los Lonely Boys, who rocked the house on July 10. Leading musician, guitarist and composer, Jesse Cook performed acoustic elements from around the globe on July 17th. Judy Collins, a long-time American favorite, sang folksongs on July 24 with her interpretative blend of pop, rock and roll and show tune standards. Legendary singer and songwriter, Don McLean, wrapped up the series on July 31 with his classic hits such as “Vincent” (“Starry, Starry Night”), “Crying,” “I Love You So,” “Castles in the Air” and “American Pie.” These events were ticketed because of the quality and entertainer recognition. Sold-out performances were threatened with rain but the weather cooperated producing double rainbows for the finale. The series was emceed by County Commissioner David Humke and John Slaughter, Washoe County Manager.

With the support from our partners, we were able to provide World Music Series free to attendees and allowed the community to experience a variety of global cultures not typically familiar in this community. Each Wednesday night at Wingfield Park there was an estimated capacity attendance of 3,000 people. The artists were Na Lei Hulu I Ka Wekiu (Hawaiian); Carlos Nunez (Spanish); Mariachi Sol de Mexico de Jose Hernandez (Mexican); New York Gypsy All-Stars (Baltic) and Conjunto Chappottin y Sus Estrellas (Cuban). Emceed by Sarah Johns Evening Anchor with KOLO 8 News Now.

Dancing In The Park continues to be a mainstay of the weekly Artown series. Since its inception local, regional and national dancers have graced the stage at Wingfield Park every Tuesday at dusk. This year, dancers were represented from the Northern Nevada Dance Coalition, Sierra Nevada Ballet, Innerrhythms Dance Theatre and Rhythmatrix and Heart and Sole Dance Academy. KOLO 8 News Now Evening Anchor, Sarah Johns, emceed this series.
Pops On The River commemorated 20 years of Pops in downtown Reno on July 12th. 2,000 guests enjoyed their favorite Broadway tunes mingled with great food, wine, themes, costumes, prizes and plenty of fun in Wingfield Park. The Reno Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Laura Jackson, celebrated the best of Broadway. Crowds were enthralled with the unique styles of guest vocalists, Susan Egan, Gary Mauer and Anne Runolfsson.

Day of Visual Art has been bundled up into one day to showcase the many talented artists in Reno. Crowds came in droves to the Old Southwest neighborhood backyards where residents combined their offerings for the public to experience. Included is a family reunion that takes place each year on La Rue Avenue with generations of artists work on display and for sale; the annual YArt sale on Mt. Rose Street and Art In The Garden on Monroe Street. Celebrating its 13th year with Artown in the picturesque garden settings, this sprawling neighborhood is transformed each year into a walking visual arts gallery. In other parts of town, there were tree walks in Idlewild Park, Micano Home Garden Decor art galleria, Reno Rose Society presented the visual art of roses in Idlewild Park, there were 50 years of Wild Nevada at the Nevada Wilderness Headquarters, guided museum tours of the Nevada Museum of Art, Pawspective Art Show at the Nevada Humane Society and much, much more. The Day of Visual Art is truly an exceptional experience looked forward to each year.

Sunshine, friends, gardens to admire and beautiful artistry- the Day of Visual Arts

Workshops and Exhibits. Throughout the month, 76 entities such as VSA Nevada, Arbors Memory Care Community, community centers, The Clay Canvas, Sierra Arts Foundation, Wildflower Village and others created workshops and exhibits to highlight the many aspects of cultural arts in our area.

Movies in the Park is always a popular event and this year was no exception. Wingfield Park was transformed into a movie theater after dark on Friday evenings. Audiences enjoyed the full moon and Zomboo from KOLO 8 News Now on July 11th for the 40th anniversary showing of Mel Brooks “Young Frankenstein.” Clark Cable and Marilyn Monroe once again discovered each other in “The Misfits” on July 18th and the plucky red-haired orphan “Annie” came to life on July 25th with opening remarks from Board Member Rachael Austin of Muckel Anderson CPAs.

Closing Night is symbolic for many reasons. It is the culmination of the preceding 31 days rolled into one package. A party celebrating the close of the month and all that the audience experienced. It is a celebration of the arts community, the conclusion of the July festival and simply put- a night to explode. The entertainment must be vibrant and unique.
maintaining our mantra to expect the unexpected.

With the traditional flair and element of surprise, multi-cultural Grammy winning band, Ozomatli ignited the audience with a sense of vitality on July 32nd (August 1st). This group brought the community together with a mix of salsa, jazz, funk, reggae, rap and much more. The party continued with the band parading through the audience in a fun, exciting and pied piper style. Truly, a night to be remembered and a superb end to July.

Downtown, Midtown and More. During the 2014 festival we exceeded our commitment to offer our community quality arts and cultural activities. The festival had over 500 events in 32 days. We partnered with more than 100 organizations and saw an estimated attendance of 300,000. Our presenting partners are key in creating a vibrant and colorful July. All of Artown’s events in Wingfield Park and the Robert Z. Hawkins Amphitheater were at capacity, even when rain threatened to cancel events on occasion. Art walks celebrated many art forms in downtown Reno and the newly gentrified Midtown District.

Together with our artistic partners, we provided a comprehensive experience and offered something for everyone. By offering approximately 70% of the events free we have created an inclusive environment. The Burning Man Festival continues to penetrate throughout Northern Nevada and Compression brought art cars, fire art, flame effects and sculpture art to downtown Reno. Many arts education opportunities were offered enabling our audiences to participate as artists. There were events celebrating seniors, concerts in churches, art exhibits in restaurants, galleries and beautifully decorated gardens. Seniors starred in the Ageless Repertory Theater productions, popular music events took place at Trinity Episcopal Church and First United Methodist Church. Our youth celebrated the entire month through our hands-on Discover the Arts weekday free program that allowed 3,157 participants to explore many artistic genres. Local theater performances took place at many traditional theaters and non-traditional environments. There were musical performances in coffee bars, bookstores and art galleries. Art exhibits in restaurants and gardens. Cultural celebrations included a Gospel Fest, Romanian Festival, Basque Festival, Pride Festival and a Burner Folk Festival. Wherever you went during July, you could and would stumble upon interesting, unique, edgy and traditional events.

Keeping ourselves fresh, new and edgy, we always seek out new partners and presenters. The following are some of the new artistic presentations:

- Caughlin Ranch homeowners presented a Sunday night music series “Concert on the Green”
- Historic Reno Preservation Society provided the history and tours of Reno’s Jewish Cemetery
- The art of rock making at Fred and Wilma’s Rock Quarry
- Silent Disco at River Farm
- Art exhibits in neighborhood shops: Buenos Grill, Walden’s and Bighorn Olive Oil Company at Mayberry Landing
- Bryce Chisholm (2014 Poster Artist) showing at BVW Jewelers on Foothill Road in South Reno
- Creative fun fair celebration at McKinley Arts and Culture Center
- An art exhibit featuring local works and a major national display of reused and recycled materials at the Mathewson-IGT Knowledge Center, University of Nevada Reno
- Bastille Day Revolution on the River celebration in the Powning District
- LeRue Press open house at Reno’s operating press plant
- Creative and decorative fish hung and displayed along the Truckee River

ARTOWN MAKES AN IMPRESSION

KNPB Documentary. KNPB, the Northern Nevada PBS affiliate, followed Artown for a year and made a 90 minute documentary, which recorded every aspect of the festival from the planning and booking to the implementing and wrap up part of the festival. KNPB described the documentary, “The Work of Art: Artown will take us behind the scenes of Reno’s annual art festival, examining its history and impact. The film highlights diverse groups making a difference within our community: a church helping businesses revitalize a neighborhood, a program utilizing art to improve the quality of life for seniors suffering from dementia, Burning Man adding cultural and artistic diversity, and more.”

2014 Poster Artist. The 2014 poster was created by local artist Bryce Chisholm. His love of street art was inspired by under-valued beauty in compelling raw work of street artists. Coming upon a beautiful mural in an alley leaves him with a strong impression. This powerful type of messaging inspired him to push his art in a way that portrays human emotions with a raw street feeling. This led to our 2014 Poster depicting a street musician, a child painting and the arch of the Wingfield Park amphitheater amidst the Truckee River fork.

Website – www.renoisartown.com. To further convey our messaging, we contracted with JM Studios to improve Artown’s website and create a user friendly, interactive site. Our unique visitors for July alone were 40,170 with combined hits May – July 5,873,886.

Western Arts Alliance. Artown continues to grow and broaden the reputation of Reno. This year, Executive Director Beth Macmillan will continue to expand her commitment to the arts with her recent appointment as President of the arts organization, Western Arts Alliance. This recognition reiterates the national exposure and recognition that Artown has in the arts world. We gain invaluable ties, networking and keep abreast of industry trends through these relationships; it is an honor to be a part of the leadership gatherings presented by this prestigious organization.

THE ART OF EDUCATION

Artown’s longest running children’s series, the free Discover The Arts program, continued to grow and include interactive and hands-on opportunities for youth. This 22-day series held at McKinley Arts and Culture Center called attention to the creative learning benefits for children ages 6 – 12. The series included multi-disciplinary programs, workshops, storytelling, arts projects, dance, and ice cream from the Northern Nevada Dairymen/Model Dairy, costumed performances, green art projects and more. This program brought 3,157 participants that were inspired by the magic of arts, culture and the broad reach of arts education.

Americans for the Arts* reports the second reason for supporting the arts is “Students with an education rich in the arts have higher GPAs and standardized test scores, and lower drop-out rates—benefits reaped by students regardless of socio-economic status. Students with 4 years of arts or music in high school average 100 points better on their SAT scores than students with just one-half year of arts or music.”

Outreach is always essential and this year we continued with:

- 30,000 flyers in English and Spanish to Washoe County School District promoting free activities during July

- Over 22 workshops for Kids Cottage, Boys and Girls Club of Truckee Meadows and Evelyn Mount Community center teaching children Arts Improvisation, Acting 123, T.E.A.M. and Behind The Scenes

- PBS Personalities, Miss Rosa and Mr. Steve toured Boys and Girls Clubs in our area

- The Boys and Girls Club of Truckee Meadows created life through their artistic creations that evolved from the “People Project”

Missoula Children’s Theatre – Rapunzel. Each year, Artown works with touring actors from Missoula Children’s Theatre and opened both hearts and minds of children to the possibility of achievement through creativity and teamwork that they learn during the theatrical process. Rehearsals were held at the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of Northern Nevada and the performances were at Damonte Ranch High School (known as the PAC - Performing Arts Center – School).
Open auditions and outreach sessions were sent to a myriad of students through Nevada Home Schools, private and public schools including Kids Life NV, Sage Ridge School, St. Thomas Aquinas and Our Lady of Snows. A total of 60 students were selected and commenced on an intense and grueling 4 day rehearsal program to learn their roles in Rapunzel, a musical adaptation of the Grimm’s fairy tale. The final performance was on July 19th at 3 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.

*Americans for the Arts serves, advances, and leads the network of organizations and individuals who cultivate, promote, sustain, and support the arts in America. Founded in 1960, Americans for the Arts is the nation’s leading nonprofit organization for advancing the arts and arts education.

PARTNERS

It takes a village is a popular sentiment and perhaps overused. But with Artown, it truly does take a village to put on a month-long arts and culture, multi-disciplinary festival.

Sponsor support reiterates the commitment to the Arts in our community and belief in Artown’s mission “to strengthen Reno’s arts industry, foster its civic identity and enhance its national image, thereby creating a climate for the cultural and economic rebirth of the region” and the positive influence it has on our city. This support came in the form of corporate, foundation grants, federal state, county and city government support in addition to our in-kind donations ranging from banners to hotel lodging to venues.

Over 90% of the July festival is created and supported by our presenters. These organizations, businesses, foundations and individuals enrich the month and provide us with over 500 free events that intertwine our community with social and artistic engagements through the arts. We celebrate the spirit of the community in July. These presenters are the core of the festival. The following are a sample of how Artown works with our presenters in the month of July:

- A grueling 24-hour Mural Marathon sponsored by Circus Circus Reno featuring seven artists. First place went to Rex Norman, with his mural of the Strong Man. All murals will remain on display on the Circus Circus

“To Save a Town” by Rex “Killbuck” Norman, received first place in the Circus Circus 24- Hour Mural. Cash prize for the winner was $2,000.
Building for an entire year. This will be a welcoming message to all who travel south on Virginia Street that will benefit the community and beautify the downtown area.

- Local singer, Jakki Ford, maximized her visibility by producing her own show “Alive and Swingin!” accompanied by the Reno Jazz Orchestra

- Good Luck Macbeth presented critically acclaimed Sondheim’s “Company”

- Doors to Recovery exhibit of locally crafted and painted doors stemming from the original Lear Theater building

- The Reno Municipal Band concerts at The Wingfield Park Glenn Little Amphitheater with lunch time performances on Wednesdays and Fridays

- TACH (Traditional Association for Cultural Harmony) presented world music with their dance fusion, sitars and classical guitars at the Laxalt Auditorium

- Northern Nevada Pride celebrated pride awareness with a parade of 52 entrants and a park full of supporters of gay rights

- The Funk of James Brown with the 18 piece Reno Jazz Orchestra

- Jeff Ross gave us deep insight through his Behind The Scenes photographic display

- Summer of Sustainability: Reused + Recycled = Art at the Mathewson-IGT Knowledge Center at UNR

- Day of Visual Art on July 12th with home owners in the Old Southwest coming together to present this ever-popular collaboration of art projects

- Workshops and ongoing events including Art for Healing at Renown Medical Center; Mack Nez Johnson a Native Soul’s Art Retrospective at the Lake Mansion; Triangles and Other Geometric Shapes at Truckee Meadows Community College; Urban Roots featuring Art, Food and Roots; LeRue Press Printing and Publishing open house and a Kids Art Camp at Alf Sorenson. Many more were held throughout the area reiterating the importance of telling the undefined story of art through exhibits and workshops

VOLUNTEERS

Artown volunteers take pride and ownership of the many aspects of Artown. Their enthusiasm is contagious and reaches out to audiences, artists and offering assistance in every aspect of the festival. This year, Artown had 116 volunteers willing to donate their time to ensure every event was a success; the strength of volunteerism and the importance for all organizations, particularly Artown, is shown every year through the volunteer team and their camaraderie.

The average event day began hours before each performance, dealing with set-up, coordination and logistics, all completed during the peak heat hours of the day. Event tear-down and clean-up begins immediately after the performances conclude. On average, volunteers do not leave the venue until 10:30 p.m. or later. The dedication demonstrated by the volunteers was an invaluable part of the festival. The volunteers’ duties included:

- Being Ambassadors for Artown while greeting attendees

- Sales of Artown and artist merchandise

- Distributing marketing materials including Little Book calendars, playbills, posters and mailings

- Customer service representatives: helping direct attendees, enforce park rules and coordinate seating

- Directing traffic, parking, ushering and wristband application
• Working with Artown’s “Give $3 To Keep Artown Free” campaign
• Monitoring the audience for security to ensure the safety and comfort of festival patrons
• Venue tear-down of staging, clean-up, garbage and recycling

While many Artown volunteers contributed to the festival on an individual basis, others donated their time and energy through local and national affiliate groups. Organizations that lent their services included:

• Bobo’s Street Team led the charge each Monday night in Wingfield Park for the Family Series
• Miss Reno, Sparks & Washoe County Scholarship Program Preliminary to Miss Nevada & Miss America
• Volunteers from Reno Tahoe USA, U.S. Bank, Circle K and NV Energy gave their time to help the “Give $3 to Keep Artown Free” campaign

NOT JUST JULY- RENO IS YEAR ROUND PROGRAMMING

To leverage artistic offerings and create a revenue stream during the off season, Artown brings artists to Reno who are not available on the west coast in July and also fills an artistic void by bringing artists to Reno who otherwise would not perform in our community. In addition these artist engagements provide nationally and internationally acclaimed artists during non-tourist seasons. This season we presented The Idan Raichel Project, Pink Martini, Dance Theatre of Harlem and The African Children's Choir supported by sponsors Fox 11, Steinway Piano Gallery Reno and The X Radio Station.

Idan Raichel – 10/13/13: The Idan Raichel Project brought its acclaimed live concert experience to the stage at The Grand Sierra Resort and Casino Grand Theatre in October.

What began as an unusual song on Israeli’s popular radio stations became the sound of The Idan Raichel Project. With its haunting chorus in the Ethiopian language of Amharic and an exotic, global fusion sound “Bo’ee” became an instant crossover hit. It catapulted The Idan Raichel Project to the top of Israel pop charts. The leader of this inspiring collective of musicians from a wide variety of cultural origins is Idan Raichel, a composer, keyboardist and producer who is now a household name in his native Israel.

The Idan Raichel Project is known around the world for its ambitious cross-cultural collaborations that changed the face of Israeli popular music. They have become global ambassadors representing a hopeful world in which artistic collaboration breaks down barriers between people of different backgrounds and beliefs.

Dance Theater of Harlem 11/16/13: A full night of outstanding dance with The Dance Theatre of Harlem. A ballet company of racially diverse artists, who perform the most demanding repertory at the highest level of quality appeared on the stage in the Grand Theater.

A leading dance institution of unparalleled global acclaim, The Dance Theatre of Harlem was founded in 1969 by Arthur Mitchell and Karel Shook as an affirmation of the power of art to transform. Shortly after the assassination of The Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Mitchell was inspired to start a school that would offer children — especially those in Harlem, the community in which he was born — the opportunity to learn about dance and the allied arts. Now in its fourth decade, Dance Theatre of Harlem has grown into a multi-cultural dance institution with an extraordinary legacy of providing opportunities for creative expression and artistic excellence that continues to set standards in the performing arts. Dance Theatre of Harlem has achieved unprecedented success, bringing innovative and bold new forms of artistic expression to audiences in New York City, across the country and around the world. A truly compelling and inspiring story whose message is still relevant.

Now under the leadership of Artistic Director Virginia Johnson, DTH presents a repertoire comprised of classics as well as cutting-edge new works that bring unprecedented relevance to classical ballet. They remain committed to the excellence Community outreach is fundamental to Artown, regional dancers and a key part of Dance Theatre of Harlem’s mission. On November 15th, a Master Ballet Class for advanced level ballet students who may aspire to continue dance as a career was held. Over 50 dancers experienced the opportunity of a lifetime – the opportunity to be taught by an artist of this caliber; former prima ballerina Virginia Johnson (DTH Artistic Director).

Pink Martini – 12/1/13: Just in time for the holidays, Pink Martini returned to Reno to kick off the holiday season. Known as the “little orchestra” Pink Martini featured 12 musicians. Original lead singer, China Forbes, returned this year and wowed the audience with her stage presence and strong vocals. Pink Martini, well known to Reno audiences, draws inspiration from the romantic Hollywood musicals of the 1940’s and 50’s. Their style blends jazz, lounge and multi-cultural flavor to achieve the perfect balance of class and sass.

African Children’s Choir (ACC) – 2/28/14: Artown was proud to present a unique and heart-warming performance from The African Children’s Choir. In 1984, in the midst of Uganda’s civil war, human rights activist Ray Barnett was called on to help the country’s many thousands of orphaned and starving children. Ray and his team came up with a unique approach to impact the lives of these children, one child at a time – the African Children’s Choir.

Continuing with our goal of bringing unique and diverse events to our area, Artown continued on its cultural journey when the African Children's Choir presented the beauty and hope of Africa while singing gospel favorites, African traditional songs and dance. To date, over one thousand vulnerable boys and girls have been through the Choir program and funds generated have provided the opportunity of education and hope for many more in some of the most desperate and needy areas of Africa.

To inspire our local children, Artown presented two free performances for 1,200 students. This program showcased the hardship, diversity and culturally rich dance from the region. Then on February 27th, the 14 representatives from The African Children’s Choir were taken to Roy Gomm Elementary for a Song Swap. The ACC children sang a full verse of “Nkosi Sikelele” (Africa’s national anthem). Then the school children joined the ACC on the second full verse. To show our team spirit, the ACC children were given kazoos and shown how to use them for an exuberant version of “Take Me Out To The Ball Game.” This event was a highlight for all involved, including Governor Brian Sandoval. The children also had an opportunity to interact during a sit down dinner and tried to forge the cultural differences with conversations on similarities and differences between their cultures and lifestyles.
20TH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Our mission for the last 19 years has been to “strengthen Reno’s arts industry, foster its civic identity and enhance its national image, thereby creating a climate for the cultural and economic rebirth of our region.” We believed in this and conscientiously programmed all events with this statement in mind. Collectively we inspired and helped unify the downtown core. We will use the 19 years as a launching pad for our 20th celebration. We know we have been a vital part of creating the rebirth economically and artistically in Downtown Reno. We will look to using this model in other neighborhood districts for the next 20 years. Reno is Uptown, Downtown, Midtown, Around Town and your Artown!

Billboard Marketing
I-80 is commonly known as the gateway to Reno and connects Reno with locals and visitors with an average of 26 million annually passing through the corridor by Colfax, CA. These display units speak to tourists originating from regions where advertising is prohibitive due to costs; billboard marketing is an effective means of communicating to the traveler with each board having a strong read time.

Artown partnered with two billboard companies. One in Colfax and another in Sparks—both displayed a high profile series of spectacular digital displays that tied into Artown’s existing marketing campaigns:

VisCom Outdoor
• 14’ x 48’ digital face rotating between 5 advertising messages every 6-8 seconds
• Located in the Sierra Foothills at Colfax midway between Sacramento and Lake Tahoe exposed to 26 million people annually

YESCO
• 14’ x 48’ digital face rotating weekly between four messages
• Located on the northeast corner of the Spaghetti Bowl Interchange

Total Billboard Media Value: $5,000
Social Media
Social media is defined as the social interaction among people in which they create, share or exchange information and ideas in virtual communities and networks. Artown must stay current on the most effective and innovative means to reach our audience. This year, we took a pro-active approach in utilizing social media to capture the audience and engage them in our story. We held a strategic marketing meeting in May and set in place our social strategy for the festival and began our plan of action. We followed this plan throughout the month; essential in this was the goal of telling the full story and not just the facts. Creating clever strategies designed to capture a broader audience was our goal.

At the end of July, we reached 10,000 Facebook followers due to this campaign. As a way to involve our audience and build awareness for the 500+ events, we created a “Where am I?” campaign with discrete picture collages of venues, sponsors and various forms of art. The interaction we received was instrumental in increasing our following. Within no time, we had a vocal fan base encouraging us to unveil more of Artown. Using comedic phrases brought out the personality of the Artown office. We wanted Reno to recognize who we are behind the scenes and not just the basic information such as time, location and place; social media did just that. Symbolic hashtags (#July2014 #Renoisartown #typical #Reno #Weather #TheShowGoesOn) put us on the trendy map encouraging fans to create chatter about Artown.

Artown puts the lie to all of those Reno stereotypes

If living well is the best revenge, as the writer Calvin Tomkins put it, then Artown is the best answer to those who think that “Reno 911!” was an accurate depiction of life in the Biggest Little City in the World.

For 19 years now, Artown has been putting the lie to all of those comedians’ jokes (as well as those of a Muppet or two) about Reno’s no-culture culture, jokes that even some residents, past and present, have come to believe.

The eclectic monthlong festival of the arts, which runs through “July 32” (Aug. 1, for those so inclined) at a wide variety of venues around the community, is all the proof anyone should need that there’s a lot more to Reno than divorces and cow-county brothels, decaying casinos and Wayne Newton wannabes.

Why, this town can demonstrate a lot of class when it wants to.

It’s true that even a lot of Reno residents were skeptical when a group of local leaders and arts enthusiasts proposed a citywide festival of the visual and performing arts.

The first festival, in 1996, attracted an estimated 30,000 folks to the various events, mostly in downtown. By 1999, the attendance topped 100,000, with a reported economic impact of nearly $3.5 million; last year, more than 300,000 participated in the celebration, with an estimated impact of nearly $15 million.

Over the years, newspapers and magazines across the country have felt the vibe, raving about the festival, even if they often resorted to the same tired stereotypes that the city has so often decried as they expressed surprise at what could actually be found going on here.

There are several important reasons for the success of Artown:

1. The sheer breadth of its offerings. Lots of big-name performers have graced the Artown stages — the band Los Lonely Boys and singers Don McLean and Judy Collins are among this year’s headliners — but there are many more who you’ve never heard of, yet won’t soon forget. The festival this year opened last week with country acts Nashville’s Mountain Heart and Sherrie Austin (country by way of Australia!) and will close on Aug. 1 with Ozomatli, which describes itself as a “multigenre, multicultural Grammy winning band” with “street-party consciousness.”

Ongoing events at Wingfield Park feature weekly movies, rock ‘n’ roll, dance and more, and a variety of local groups can be enjoyed at Bartley Ranch on Monday evenings.

2. It’s not just for adults, and it’s not just for sitting around and watching. The schedule is full of hands-on events for children and adults — including an assortment of classes (some with nominal charges), including ballet, tile painting, improvisational comedy and on and on.

3. It involves the entire community. While it’s overseen by a board of volunteers and has a small professional staff, Artown is actually an umbrella organization over events and programs put on by countless area organizations. The Reno Philharmonic Orchestra’s annual Pops on the River concert at Wingfield Park has been a part of Artown since the beginning in 1996, for instance; the Tahoe Players Association has joined up this year with 15 performances of the Broadway hit “Avenue Q” at the Knitting Factory in downtown Reno.

4. It’s fun.

So take that, Fozzie Bear, Seth Meyers and every other jokster looking for a cheap laugh at Reno’s expense.

Those of us who love Artown know the truth about the city: It’s no joke.

Rediscovering Reno

NEVADA IS GOOD FOR THE SOUL. "THE BIGGEST CITY IN THE WORLD" IS HOME TO ONE OF THE WEST'S MOST VIBRANT ARTS SCENES, TOO.

STORY BY CHRISTINE DEORIO

PIONEER CENTER FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS Known for its gold geodesic dome roof that nearly touches the ground, this 1,500-seat venue—completed in 1967—is on the Nevada State Register of Historic Places and the National Register of Historic Places. Home to the Reno Philharmonic Orchestra and the A.V.A. Ballet Theatre, the "Golden Turtle" hosts more than 100 live performances each year, including the popular "Broadway Comes to Reno" series—this fall, catch Blue Man Group, "Flashdance" and "Jersey Boys," too. S. Virginia St., pioneercenter.com

GRIMES POINT ROCK ART Some of the area's most fascinating art can be found not in galleries or museums, but outside, at one of the country's most accessible petroglyph sites. At Grimes Point (about 75 miles from Reno) you'll find hundreds of chocolate-brown boulders inscribed with circles, lines, and human and animal figures—all estimated to be about 6,000 years old. Visit on your own and view the petroglyphs from a short, self-guided interpretive trail, or join a free educational tour led by the Nevada Rock Art Foundation this August 16 or October 18. nvrockart.org

LAKE TAHOE SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL The drama of Lake Tahoe's spectacular scenery meets the drama of live theater at this annual festival at Sand Harbor State Park, not far from Incline Village. Each summer, more than 20,000 patrons gather at the outdoor amphitheater to enjoy professional productions of Shakespeare's works as he intended them to be seen—outdoors, under the stars. This year, gorgeous sets and costumes will transform the lakeshore into the Forest of Arden six nights a week from July 11 to August 24, in a production of Shakespeare's comedy "As You Like It." lakeashakespeare.com

RIVERSIDE ARTIST LOFTS Rising above the Truckee River, the Late Gothic Revival-style Riverside building has been converted from a historic hotel to a unique art space. The top five floors offer affordable live/work studios to artists—occasionally open to the public during the annual "Artown" festival—while the ground level houses the Sierra Arts Gallery, where you can browse contemporary artwork by new, mid-career and established artists, as well as University of Nevada students. 1 S. Virginia St., sierraarts.org
“OK, so if you could use any one word on a Sunday morning to describe 19 years of Artown to the grateful world, what word might it be?” I asked the beautiful bastions of beaux-arts in our valley, whose names are Beth Macmillan, the executive director of the monthlong celebration, and Jennifer Mannix, its marketing director. Spending an hour with them it’s easy to see why the event is so popular — they’re both vivacious, with great senses of humor and dedication to the task at hand.

We went all over the map with that challenge — the maturation of the July art and entertainment marathon from its very root: Pops on the River, a somewhat upscale, dress-up dinner affair and concert in Wingfield Park that preceded Artown, and its popularity remains. But that tuxedo-and-cocktail dress event is now but one event in a month of equally entertaining but often shorts-and-T-shirt, folding-chair evenings and afternoons, the light-classical music of the Pops blending in with the reggae, hip-hop, Basque, choral, bagpipe or the Reno Municipal Band playing Sousa marches. Or in the churches, some but not all downtown, the ragtime piano wizardry of Squeak Steele straight from the Comstock, the powerful Tongan church choir, the Masterworks Chorale, but never second fiddle (musician’s slang) to the mighty Casevant organ blowing the doors out of the Trinity Episcopal Church with all its 2,200 pipes.

OK, “maturation.” That’s one word. Then we took off on what might be the “expanding” of the art and skills and venues. The event began on the river; surely, Walter Van Tilburg Clark himself would have loved to have lived to see the rafters on the Truckee scooting by the McKinley Park Center while we sat on our beach chairs watching the ukuleles and dancers direct from Waikiki Beach. But, in 19 years, there’s more than music going on all over town while those ukes strum — Artown is art and facilitates the endeavors of artists, and what Beth and Jennifer impressed upon me was the diversity of art — art is painting and sculpture. And glass and basketwork and fabric. And play-acting and dancing and singing. As kids, we saw this at the county fair, an event whose days are long over. For the contemporary artist, Artown pulls the creative community together and supplies the county fairs of our youth, in venues throughout the valley.

“Maturation,” or “expanding.” But that’s two words. I threw in another: adaptation. Being involved in this aging column and with the air races for scores of years, I’ve watched the town change right out from under us, and Artown, coming up on its 20-year anniversary, has done a masterful job of adapting to its marketplace. The demographics of the valley have changed, both in population size, age, geography and ethnicity. The event adapted gracefully from a one-nightstand, tuxedo-and-white-tablecloth, tunes-on-the-Truckee gig to 31 summer nights — and days — from a once-primitive environment to first-class accommodations, sound and lighting tech, and, a drum roll, please: the Web. Wanna know what’s cookin’ tonight? Surf www.artown.com, click Sunday, July 27, and off you go. If something changes or is added, there it is, real-time. Within the adaptation, it’s not all technical — it’s the sound, the presence, the valley’s Latino influence with its beautiful tunes and dancing, both classic and contemporary.

And in that vein, the ongoing inclusion of other artistic endeavors that have come aboard — close cooperation with Brúka Theater: With the Discovery Museum. The Nevada Museum of Art. These and others are invited and encouraged to showcase their activities under the Artown umbrella.

So, I asked for one word, and remain stumped as to which one best describes the month of July — the event’s “maturation.” Or its “expanding” into almost every creative idea that can be compressed into 31 days. “Adaptation” — remaining relevant over nearly two decades — not easily accomplished in the art community. (One of Beth’s joys is that there are folks attending Artown now who first came as fairly young children and are now bringing their own babes-in-arms!)

Some caution should be noted here: Attendance of Artown events can become habitual. I saw a couple I know at the Trinity Episcopal Church on July Fourth when the pipe organ was rockin’ out, and was surprised to see them there again a week later for a choir performance.

“We found out how easy it was to get downtown and park, and we’re back!” he explained.

It is a pretty easy venue to get to on the Truckee, and most events are just as commodious.

Beth and Jennifer are the zenith — indeed the very pantheon of a cast of thousands, well, maybe hundreds — who bring to our valley a monthlong show that other cities would love to host. Other cities emulate Artown, but the strength and longevity of an event like this does not happen overnight or easily. It takes people like them and the league of volunteers who pitch in for a while — well, 19 years so far — to have an Artown. And we have ours, and it’s a model for similar events all over the nation.

In fact, Artown’s popularity has grown so immensely that special arrangements had to be effected for this year’s event — Beth had to inveigle the stuffy international body that administers the Gregorian calendar to add a one-year-only extra day to July, to accommodate a needed night to make their 2014 schedule work. Look in your little Artown book and you’ll find “July 32.” (And such is the humor and caprice of Beth and Jennifer that enables this festival to make Reno proud of Artown for what will be 20 years, next July.)

This column’s been accused of being a mouthpiece for Reno High School, but hey, it’s the only public high school Reno had when I was struggling to learn readin’ and writin’ — so I’ll remind those of us who matriculated there in the last 130 years that the seventh Huskies’ triennial All-School Reunion is slated for Aug. 17 on the front lawn of that big brick pile on Booth Street. Get aboard by Friday, email me or the alumni association, and God bless America!

Student/Senior

Thank you to the over 200 students and seniors who donated to our 2014 season.
Support the ‘Renissance’

There is an art movement in town being referred to as the Reno Renaissance, or the “Renissance.” As an artist, this has been fascinating to watch, and it’s an honor to be a part of. The term is describing a very real artistic and creative explosion happening in the Truckee Meadows—an explosion that has been gaining momentum for the last four years and now is charging forward with locomotive ferocity.

Art brings positive change within communities. It enriches our physical world and experience, and it elevates our perspective. Within a community rich in the arts, quality of life skyrocket and makes cities more desirable to live in. This, in turn, brings in businesses and higher wages, all of which leads to a happier population.

The backbone of arts in Reno is community, and we are on our way to becoming a major hub for the arts. Four years ago, I was a member of the Salvagery Artist Collective. What started as a group of artists painting pianos for Artown continued into more warehouses and groups providing space, tools and creative dialogue for arts to flourish and evolve.

Today, there are multiple facilities in the area doing the same thing, including Valley Arts Research Facility, Reno Art Works, Cuddleworks, the Holland Project, Wedge Ceramic Studio and the largest of them, the Generator, a community builder and art space. The infrastructure of these creative spaces is putting Reno on the artistic map.

Art around town

The renaissance is becoming apparent throughout the area. There are murals by Joe C. Rock, Bryce Chisholm and many others seem to appear overnight. Artists and new groups are starting to promote the arts, such as the Creative Coalition of Midtown and Reno Art Spot and its first Thursday Art Walks that have brought artists’ work to an increasing number of venues—providing new forums for artists to show their art to greater audiences.

We have everything we need to become a true destination for the arts.

Reno is an auspicious place for artists to live and work because the cost of living, while increasing, still is relatively low. It also has the community art spaces to nurture creative growth, and people who attend art shows and support the artists. We also have the talent.

There is so much to choose from in the arts in Reno—art walks, multiple theater companies, galleries, cafes, salons and bars—showing artwork all over town. Art organizations and spaces promote and facilitate creativity and are always welcoming interest and new participants. And every week there are usually five or six art showings.

But we still need continual interest and support from the community. Reno artists need to sell art to keep creating. Many of the artists on the forefront of the Renaissance are struggling to make ends meet even though market prices are very low here.

I encourage you to become part of the art community. Buy a ticket to theater performance, donate to one of several large scale sculpture projects being built around town or go to an art show and take home a painting or print from an artist.

Your monetary support is critical to the evolution of this Renaissance.

Reno is an amazing place for the arts to flourish. But the arts need your help in taking us to the next level as a community. Support your local artist, support the movement and we will grow as a city together.

Ryan Ostler is a professional fine artist and gallery manager in Reno.

Artown Kicks Off With Storytime

Updated: Tue 8:12 AM, Jul 01, 2014

By: Rebecca Kitchen - Email

RENO, NV - July means Artown. The month long celebration kicks off today with several free events. One in particular is designed to introduce kids to various different types of art. Held every morning in the McKinley Arts and Culture Center. Discover the Arts provides parents and kids a free introduction into the art world.

To kick off the month, children are being transported to a place known as "Underwood", and it's all being brought to them by a woman with a very impressive imagination.

Every year, Kathleen Durham sits down with kids for storytelling. But they aren't traditional fairy tales. These are the stories of the Underfolk, the mischievous but friendly elves that live in Durham's home.

"I just love it," Kathleen said. "I love the children. I like to tell them stories."

Kathleen has been sharing her stories of the Underfolk for longer than she can remember, but this particular storyline is part of Discover the Arts. It's a free event held every day during Artown to introduce children to various forms of art.

"They discover a lot of music," Kristen Timmerman, Discover the Arts manager said. "They discover every aspect of art. It could be clay, it could be painting. It's good for them to get every aspect of the art world. It encourages imagination.

And imagination is what Durham uses to share her stories and to create the dolls she uses to help tell them. The dolls are handcrafted by Durham, and what makes her stories special is her is not the fact that she makes the dolls. Rather as she is creating them, the dolls introduce themselves to her.

Artown Ends on High Note

RENO, NV - The official numbers aren't in yet, but Artown's Executive Director Beth MacMillan tells KOLO 8 News Now this may have been one of their strongest years yet. She says that's partly because the festival is always evolving to include events that reflect the changing culture of our area. "We really to listen and look at our population when programming the festival," she says. From Mariachi to Ozomatli, this year Artown included an increased number of Latin Culture artists.

According to MacMillan hot and stormy weather during July not hurt participation. One event had to be rescheduled, but nothing was cancelled. Additional events around our our area, including the Barracuda Open and Hot August nights also helped to draw new audiences to the art festival.

Next year is the 20th anniversary of Artown. Organizers are planning the biggest celebration yet. They say even though they don't normally invite the same artists back year after year, they do want to feature artists who were favorites over the years. If there is something that you have liked in the past, or would like to see in the future, they want to hear from you. To weigh in, check out the link to the right.
